Qatar Malone Fellowship
The National Council on U.S.-Arab Relations (NCUSAR) is pleased to sponsor the Qatar Exchange Fellowship/Malone Fellowship for qualified American professionals in academia. Five American educators will be selected for this prestigious program, which lasts for approximately one calendar year. The Fellowship consists of a Pre-Departure Preparation period (Oct-Nov 2015), Study Visit to Qatar (Approx. Nov 27-Dec 4, 2015), and Fellowship Year (Jan-Dec 2016) where participants engage in a variety of activities in order to share their new-found knowledge of Qatar with the American public, multiplying the educational impact of the program.

Malone Fellowship
Since 1984, the National Council on U.S.-Arab Relations has provided American professionals in academia, government, and business unparalleled educational experiences in the Arab world through the Joseph J. Malone Fellowship in Arab and Islamic Studies. The Fellowship projects its participants into the dynamics of Arab-U.S. relations and provides first-hand exposure to the region's considerable cultural, economic, political, and social diversity pursuant to increased knowledge and understanding. The fellowship is named in honor of Dr. Joseph J. Malone (1924-1983), an educator, historian, and author, who devoted his life to promoting better understanding between Americans and Arabs. The Malone Program provides, through a study visit to an important Arab country, an exceptionally powerful educational experience that includes introductions to host-country government officials, businessmen, academics, and scholars, and the opportunity to discuss Arab world issues and Arab-U.S. relations with American and Arab scholars, policymakers, and other specialists.
