Department of Writing and Linguistics
College of Arts and Humanities

The Department of Writing and Linguistics in the College of Arts and Humanities invites applications and nominations for the position of Lecturer. This position will be housed on the Armstrong campus of Georgia Southern University in Savannah, GA.

In January 2017, the University System of Georgia Board of Regents voted to consolidate Armstrong State University and Georgia Southern University. The new, 27,000-student university will be named Georgia Southern University with campuses in Savannah, Statesboro, and Hinesville. The expected timeline for the first entering class will be fall 2018. Complete details are available at http://consolidation.georgiasouthern.edu/.

Within this setting, the Department of Writing and Linguistics offers a B.A. degree in Writing with coursework in four areas: Creative Writing, Professional and Technical Writing, Writing Studies, and Linguistics. In addition to the major, the Department also offers minors in writing, linguistics, and professional and technical writing, and an online graduate certificate in TESOL/Applied Linguistics. The Department is an active participant in the Online Bachelor of Interdisciplinary Studies program housed in the College of Arts and Humanities and the interdisciplinary MA and online graduate certificate in Professional Communication and Leadership. The Department also is responsible for defining and teaching the required First-Year Writing courses—a two-semester sequence that provides in-depth instruction in composition to all first-year students at Georgia Southern.

Position Description. Reporting to the Department Chair, the 8 course-load lecturer position is a non-tenure-track academic appointment; the salary is competitive and commensurate with qualifications and experience. In the sixth year, candidates who demonstrate excellence in teaching and professional development, plus service to the department, college, and profession, will be eligible to apply for promotion to senior lecturer. Overall, this position contributes to enhancing the stability, sustainability, and success of the first-year writing program. Successful candidates must show increasing levels of leadership in the program.

Required Qualifications:
- Earned master’s degree suited to the Department of Writing and Linguistics.
- Minimum of one-year full-time college teaching experience or equivalence in first-year writing by the time of appointment.
- Experience with technologies common to the field of composition and rhetoric.
- Evidence of engaged student learning arising from pedagogical practices informed by the scholarship of the profession.
- Must be authorized to work in the United States for the duration of employment without assistance from the institution.

Preferred Qualifications:
- Graduate-level work in composition, rhetoric, linguistics, writing center theory, literacy theory, professional and technical writing, or other closely related areas common the field of writing and linguistics.
- Three years of experience teaching first-year writing.
- Experience teaching online.
Experience teaching diverse populations.

The deadline for submission of applications is February 23, 2018. The lecturer position starting date is August 1, 2018. A complete application consists of a letter addressing the qualifications cited above; a curriculum vitae; a brief statement of teaching philosophy; syllabi for English 1101 and 1102 (or equivalent courses); sample assignments; and the names, addresses, telephone numbers, and email addresses of at least three professional references. Only complete applications, submitted electronically on or before February 23, 2018, will be considered. Finalists will be required to submit to a background investigation. Applications and nominations should be sent to:
